Kite's owner 'in shock' due to impending financial lawsuit

Rudy Date
staff writer

William "Rusty" Wilson, owner of popular Aggieville destinations Kite's Grille and Bar and Rusty's Last Chance Saloon, is being sued for what debtor Farmers State Bank claims is a breach of contract.

The bank is suing for more than $3.6 million, the foreclosure of Kite's and the possession of other property, with a lawsuit consisting of 10 different counts of breach of contract.

Wilson said he was "in disbelief" and shocked that the bank would take such extreme measures. According to Wilson, he and the bank were in the middle of talks to reach an agreement.

"I thought, out of goodwill, we were on our way to compromise," Wilson said. "In America, anybody can sue anybody for anything. I am currently in preparation of launching a defense."

Count I states that Wilson and Kite's received a loan in the amount of $650,000 in February 2008. The document goes on to say that of that amount, $558,888 plus $90,491 in interest has not been paid. As such, the bank claims it's now entitled to possession of Kite's, which was initially offered as collateral.

Counts II, III, IV, V and VI are very similar in nature to Count I, detailing the almost $1.5 million that remains unpaid in loans and their interest from Farmers State Bank.

Counts VII and VIII differ slightly from previous counts, including Farmers State Bank's claim for monetary repayment of loans as well as possession of five automobiles offered as collateral.

Counts IX and X regard unpaid loans from Rusty's Bargain Barn Inc. and Rusty's of KC Inc., subsidiaries of W.R. Wilson Inc.

Justin Bell, a manager at Kite's, said

Kite's Grille and Bar, an Aggieville staple, is currently in legal limbo as owner William "Rusty" Wilson and Farmers State Bank attempt to resolve a multimillion-dollar lawsuit. The bank claims ownership of Kite's and Rusty's Last Chance Saloon, among other assets, as collateral for unpaid loans.

Jordan Wegele | Collegian

he shared Wilson's initial feelings of surprise and disbelief.

"I didn't believe it at all," Bell said. "I know Rusty well enough to where I know he would have told us about something so serious from the beginning."

Wilson, however, remained optimistic and said he has focused his efforts on reassuring customers that Kite's is not going to close. When asked about the potential foreclosure of Kite's, Wilson was adamant that Kite's is "absolutely not going anywhere."

"There is a zero percent chance that we are going to let Kite's foreclose," Wilson said. "We have been here for 50 years and we will be here for 50 more."

Week of Welcome helps students get accustomed to K-State atmosphere

Nicolas Wahl
staff writer

As K-State students, new and old, poured into campus Monday morning to begin the 2012 school year, many were greeted with an array of booths and activities on Bosco Student Plaza.

The scene on the plaza was all part of a joint effort by the Student Governing Association and the Office of Student Activities and Services' third annual Week of Welcome, an event designed to give students a leg up on the upcoming school year.

Student Body President Nate Spriggs spent much of the morning handing out free Rockstar energy drinks to passersby. Spriggs and Sarah Works, student coordinator for the Week of Welcome, handed out more than 1,500 Rockstars in a little over two hours. The two also handed out maps and tried to answer any questions students might have heading into the semester.

"Week of Welcome is really all about retention and helping students, especially new students, know where they're going and making sure that they have everything they need to have a good first week at K-State," Works said.

Volunteers from many different student organizations made sure that students had someone to turn to for assistance. Members of various religious and social groups were on hand to offer information, and volunteers from the K-State Student Union gave away promotional items, including the 2012 campusspecial.com coupon flip-book.

The Manhattan community was also involved in the Week of Welcome, including radio stations Q 103.5 and Power Hits 97.5, whose crews set up early in the morning to meet the first students on campus with live broadcasts and free handouts.

"It's our chance to hand out the brand new Q Card," said Doug "Chappie" Chapman, local musician. "It comes out every year and the kids come asking for it because there are such great deals on there. It's good for our radio station too, because there are thousands of brand new freshmen that don't have a local radio station yet, and this is our chance to kind of imprint our logo on their heads and gain some new listeners."

Whitney Wear, first year grad student studying College Student Development, inspects an energy drink after filling up a tub with them in front of the "Week of Welcome" tent at Bosco Student Plaza Monday August 20, 2012. The "W.O.W" stand was part of many others that were in front of the Union to promote various groups and businesses around Manhattan and K-State.

Power Hits 97.5's Kylee Naccarato, K-State alumna, was also on hand bring the event to the airwaves.

"We did our morning show out here until 9 a.m. We just talked about a lot of the promotions that we have going on," Naccarato said.

The giveaways include a chance to win $100.

"We're handing out cards to get people to make sure to listen on Thursday because the 25th caller who calls in after they hear the K-State fight song will win a hundred bucks," Naccarato said.

The booths and tents – many of which will be on the plaza until Wednesday – are only a small part of the Week of Welcome that continues to unfold.

The "week" kicked off with a pancake feed early Sunday morning and a pep rally at Bill Snyder Family Stadium that took place on Sunday night; however, the ever-growing welcome party will not conclude over the weekend. In fact, the Week of Welcome spans a total of 10 days.

"Last night we had the largest turnout for the pep rally ever," Spriggs said. "The student section was filled up plus some of the other seating. It's good to see the event continue to grow, and as long as it continues to grow, we will be able to provide more funds for it and therefore make the activities bigger and bigger."

The Student Governing Association hopes to attract a popular entertainer to the event next year.

The Week of Welcome continues tonight from 6:30 to 8:30 with the Wildcat Carnival in Bosco Student Plaza. Wednesday features, among other events, the Welcome Back Tailgate for students in animal science and industry and food science and industry from 5:30 to 7 p.m. on Weber Lawn, as well as a multicultural mixer in the K-State Student Union Courtyard from 6 to 7:30 p.m.

More information about Week of Welcome events can be found at www.k-state.edu.

Kansas Congressman formally apologizes for nude dip in holy sea

After a 2011 naked escapade in the Sea of Galilee, Kansas Republican Congressman Kevin Yoder formally apologized for his untimely skinny dipping session.

"It's certainly not an incident that I'm proud of," Yoder said in an Associated Press article published on Monday. "It is something that was obviously a mistake on my part, and I want folks in the district to know that I'm apologetic for it."

As if baring it all wasn't enough, Yoder's swim session just happened to be in the same location where the Bible says Jesus walked on water.

"It was a spontaneous moment where other members of Congress were jumping in," Yoder said in the same article. "I made the mistake of diving in. I was in for about 10 seconds and got back out."

Although swimming in the sea is permitted, public nudity is banned; even one year later, Yoder could face charges from local Israeli police.

Federal officials seize $150 million from Hezbollah

New York City prosecutors announced that they have seized $150 million from Hezbollah, a Lebanese Shiite militant group, as a part of an effort to collect money from an escrow account that officials suspect is linked to money laundering and various drug rings.

According to an Associated Press article released on Monday, prosecutors had originally filed the lawsuit last year and demanded hundreds of millions in money laundering penalties from numerous Lebanese institutions.

In the same article, authorities also said that more than $300 million was illegally wired from Lebanon to the U.S. since 2007.

Myanmar grants journalistic freedoms, lifts public censorship regulations

After years of strict government regulation, officials in the east Asian country of Myanmar ended the censorship of local publications.

For the past 50 years, Myanmar was considered to be one of the world's most restrictive media environment. Political and military conflict has dominated the country's history, resulting in heavily censored media outlets.

Myanmar, which faced political and military instability for much of the latter half of the twentieth century, views this as a step to launch a reform process. Just one year after officially electing current President Thein Sein, civil liberties, prisoner releases and friendlier international relations have slowly become a more common occurrence in the evolving nation.

Comedian Phyllis Diller dies at the age of 95

Renowned stand-up comedian Phyllis Diller died "peacefully in her sleep" at the age of 95 in her Los Angeles home on Monday morning.

Diller, who performed in several movies and toured with the United Services Organizations, saw her popularity spike in the 1960s. Her unique sense of humor included self-deprecating jokes about her looks, her cooking and her imaginary husband "Fang."

"She was a true pioneer," Fred Wostbrock, Diller's former talent agent, in a CNN article published on Monday. "She was the first lady of stand-up comedy. She paved the way for everybody."

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

The Collegian welcomes your letters. We reserve the right to edit submitted letters for clarity, accuracy, space and relevance. A letter intended for publication should be no longer than 350 words and must refer to an article that appeared in the Collegian within the last 10 issues. It must include the author's first and last name, year in school and major. If you are a graduate of K-State, the letter should include your year(s) of graduation and must include the city and state where you live. For a letter to be considered, it must include a phone number where you can be contacted. The number will not be published. Letters may be rejected if they contain abusive content, lack timeliness, contain vulgarity, profanity or falsehood, promote personal and commercial announcements, repeat comments of letters printed in other issues or contain attachments. The Collegian does not publish open letters, third-party letters or letters that have been sent to other publications or people.

Looking back: last season in K-State sports

Mark Kern

K-State's athletic teams are busy getting prepared for their seasons this year. Let's take a look at the athletic accomplishments of the sports teams from the past year.

EQUESTRIAN

The 2011-12 school year was another successful season for coach Casie Lisabeth and her team, who took third at the Big 12 Championships and sixth at the National Collegiate Equestrian Association National Championships. Meredith Finch capped off a great junior season by being named the Most Outstanding Player in the Equitation on the Flat.

ROWING

Like the equestrian team, the rowing team took third at the Big 12 Championships, winning a tiebreaker with archrival Kansas because of a victory in the 1st Varsity 8 race. At the Conference USA championships, the team finished in sixth, scoring 21 points to hold off Alabama. Senior Adria Ley, junior Allison Dorau and sophomore Megan Murray are the returners for the 1V8 team.

GOLF

The women's golf season got off to a good start, finishing second at the Sunflower Invitational at Colbert Hills Golf Course. That tournament was highlighted by the performance of current junior Gianna Misenhelter, who finished in second place, one stroke behind the leader. The Wildcats would end their season finishing eighth at the Big 12 Championships, led by current senior Hanna Roos, who placed 15th.

The men were also able to get off to a good start, finishing second at the Diet Pepsi Shocker Classic in Wichita. The Wildcats were able to put three golfers in the top 10, including returning senior co-captains Curtis Yonke and Ben Juffer, and K-State graduate Kyle Smell. Yonke and Smell tied for sixth, while Juffer placed tenth. The Wildcats won the Cowboy Classic on April 10, tying a school record for the lowest 54-hole score in school history with a 14-under-par 826. Juffer won the event in a playoff and set the school record for an individual 54-hole score with a 12-under-par 198. The Wildcats ended their season by placing ninth at the Big 12 Championships.

CROSS COUNTRY

Led by a strong race by current senior Martina Tresch, the women's cross country team got off to a good start, winning their season opening dual meet against Wichita State and UMKC at the J.K. Gold Classic. Tresch finished second at the meet, while teammates Boglarka Bozzay finished fifth and current sophomore Laura Galvan finished seventh. Two weeks later, Tresch was at it again, this time setting a university record for the Roy Griak Invitational with a time of 20:58. The team finished ninth at the Big 12 Championships, where Tresch led the team again, this time finishing in the ninth place. Tresch continued her success by qualifying for the NCAA Championships, where she finished 47th place.

The men's team split their dual at the J.K. Gold Classic, defeating Wichita State but falling to UMKC. The team was led by current senior Kyle Hanson, who finished the event in ninth place with a time of 19:23. One of the men's best performances was at the Big 12 Championships, where the team finished in eighth place, their best Big 12 finish in seven years. Current junior Adam Porter led the squad, finishing in 44th place with a time of 25:01.

VOLLEYBALL

Heading into the same season, the Wildcats were picked to finish eighth out of nine Big 12 teams, only ahead

GOLF

Augusta National Golf Club, home of the Masters Tournament, admitted its first two female members in its 80-year history.

The prestigious golf course consisted previously of all-male members until former Secretary of State Condoleezza Rice and South Carolina financier Darla Moore accepted invitations to become members.

Rice and Moore will have the opportunity to become the first women to wear the green jackets, famously exclusive to club members, when the club opens for a new season in October.

NFL

Jake Locker, former Washington Huskies star and eighth overall pick in the 2011 NFL Draft, has been named the starting quarterback for the Tennessee Titans in their Sept. 9 season opener against the New England Patriots.

Jim Wyatt, of The Tennessean, first broke the news via his Twitter account Monday, citing unspecified sources. Wyatt later cited Titans owner Bud Adams, who said he backed the decision to make Locker the top quarterback 100 percent.

Matt Hasselbeck, after leading the Titans to a 9-7 record last season, will back up Locker.

Locker threw for 542 yards and four touchdowns in five games as a rookie.

CYCLING

The U.S. Anti-Doping Agency's drug case against Lance Armstrong can now move forward after Armstrong's lawsuit against the agency was thrown out by a federal judge in Austin, Texas, on Monday.

Armstrong's next move could be to try to overturn U.S. District Judge Sam Sparks' decision by going to the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in New Orleans, or he could accept going forward with the USADA's arbitration or accept its sanctions.

Armstrong has adamantly denied doping and claimed in his lawsuit that the USADA lacked jurisdiction and that its arbitration process violates his constitutional rights.

Battle over Chick-fil-A donations pointless, hypocritical

Karen Ingram

When I first heard that the owners of Chick-fil-A were gay-unfriendly and gave donations to organizations that oppose same-sex marriage, my gut reaction was to think that I would not eat there again. I have many gay friends and do not think there is anything wrong with being gay. That being said, as time went on and my first impulse gave way to contemplation and logic, I realized it was pointless to fault Chick-fil-A for their stance — or to support them, for that matter.

I am a huge supporter of freedom of speech. After all, I work as a journalist and I'm studying to be a science fiction author. I believe people should have the right to state their opinions, whether I agree with them or not. Whether a corporation or business has the same First Amendment rights as an individual is a debate I will not get into right now, but the people in charge of Chick-fil-A are certainly entitled to their opinions.

It also occurred to me while I was following the debate that both sides were being rather hypocritical. Chick-fil-A's Customer Appreciation Day was promoted on Facebook, a gay-friendly company, and the IBM, Dell and Apple computers used to spread the word were purchased from gay-friendly companies as well. People who purchased their chicken to defy the so-called "gay agenda" using American Express or Capital One cards also supported the gay community because these companies are gay-friendly. So is Coca-Cola, the beverage of choice for Chick-fil-A, and Pepsi, with whom K-State has a contract. So you see, anyone who opposes gays and same-sex marriage is a hypocrite because they use products and services every day from companies that support our gay citizens.

While I despise hypocrites, I also happen to be one. We all are. For example, I am opposed to child labor and unfair wages, but I wear cheap clothes that were made by grossly underpaid 14-year-olds working in a sweatshop in China. I oppose dependence on fossil fuels and despise pollution, but I drive a car. And so on and so forth.

Unless you live in one of those hippie communes that produces enough food and clothing for all of its members, it's impossible not to be a hypocrite in our modern world. There are too many companies and corporations out there responsible for our goods to monitor in order to ensure that their beliefs mesh with our own. Even if you think you know what you're buying, you may be surprised if you do the research. Companies are owned by parent companies that disguise the real entity behind the curtain. American cars are being made in Japan while Japanese corporations have factories here. I don't know about you, but I just don't have the time, patience or money to sort through it all. Do you?

It would be ridiculous to stop eating the highly addictive waffle fries I crave at Chick-fil-A just because I have gay friends and support same-sex marriage. Where I choose to buy my chicken sandwich is not going to make any difference to the rights of my friends in the long run. I may be a hypocrite, but at least I am an honest one. Pass the ketchup.

Chick-fil-A boycott necessary in current political climate

Laura Thacker

Since July, Chick-fil-A has dominated the headlines following the news that the company donated more than $1.9 million to anti-gay causes in the year 2010, more than any other year on public record, according to a July 2 article on equalitymatters.org. Although the media has been covering these donations for years, the current political climate, combined with the release of this information, has created a strong reaction in the public.

While gay rights activists called for a boycott, others responded by eating at Chick-fil-A to show their support. While I understand that a business has the right to support any group or cause, I wholeheartedly support those boycotting the fast-food restaurant. Just as the business owners have the right to donate money to

organizations like the Family Research Council, which states on its website that "families are formed only by ties of blood, marriage, or adoption, and 'marriage' is a union of one man and one woman," consumers have the right to choose not to give their money to that business.

Where we spend our money is a powerful way to show what we believe in. While it may be hard to show our core beliefs totally through our purchases, especially with the business practices in America, this is an easy one to follow: buy a chicken sandwich somewhere else. While there are dozens of business practices I inadvertently support every time I make a purchase from a large corporation, the current political climate calls for anyone who supports gay rights to put their money where their mouths are.

We are at a historic time in the fight for gay rights. By refusing to spend our money at a business that may give it to an organization that preaches hate, cleverly disguised as a concern for families, we are saying that we do not agree. Other businesses may choose not to donate their money to similar organizations based on this backlash.

Boycotting Chick-fil-A does not mean you have to hold protest signs. It means you just need to go somewhere else for a chicken sandwich. Support a local business instead. Watch Mac Lethal's YouTube video to learn how to make the perfect Chick-fil-A sandwich at home. There are so many other options.

This is not like asking people to quit buying products made outside the United States because they might have been produced via child labor (although that might solve some of our problems, too). This is suggesting that you buy lunch somewhere else if you believe that those who identify as gay or lesbian deserve the same rights as those who identify as straight.

It seems that for some consumers this may be too much to ask. In a Washington Post poll posted on July 18, 65 percent of those who responded said they would continue to patronize Chick-fil-A, while 35 percent said they would not. Comparatively, of those who responded to another Washington Post poll in May, 53 percent said they supported gay marriage. So why the difference?

If you truly support gay rights, then show it in the way that you spend your money. Boycotting Chick-fil-A is a way for those of us who believe in equal rights to show this support in a tangible way. Sometimes a chicken sandwich is more than a chicken sandwich, and this is one of those times.

Christian student organization revives pizza-tasting competition

Austin Nichols
news editor

Papa Murphy's wins Cats for Christ's 'Best Pizza in Town' competition by a landslide

K-State students loaded their plates with five different types of pizza Monday night as they decided who had "The Best Pizza in Town."

Cats for Christ, a K-State student organization and a ministry for the Manhattan Church of Christ, hosted The Best Pizza in Town competition as a kick-off to their Welcome Week.

Five different pizza companies donated a total of 17 pizzas for the taste testing competition. The five included: Sbarro, Old Chicago, Papa Murphy's, Papa John's and Dominos.

"We wanted to get a chance for all the pizza companies to donate back to K-State," said Joseph Morien, campus minister for Cats for Christ. "And they were able to get their name out there to say, hey, we care about the kids."

It's the second time Cats for Christ has hosted The Best Pizza in Town competition. The last competition was held two years ago. The major difference in the two events was in how long students lingered after the pizza-tasting portion.

"There were a lot more people, we did a lot of publicity for it," Kelsey Foutch, senior in elementary education, said about the first pizza tasting contest

"We wanted to get a chance for all the pizza companies to donate back to K-State. And they were able to get their name out there to say, hey, we care about the kids."

Joseph Morien
Cats for Christ campus minister

two years ago. "This year we had fewer people but people were interacting with each other more and not just coming in, eating pizza and then leaving."

This year, the winner of the competition was Papa Murphy's by a wide margin; Papa Murphy's received almost double the number of votes of Old Chicago, which placed second.

There were 39 votes cast with 53 people in attendance.

Faculty adviser Rod Howell attributed the revival of the pizza-tasting contest to Morien.

"We did not have a campus minister last year," Howell said. "It did not feel like it was appropriate to put the effort in. Joseph [Morien] put a lot of legwork in to making this happen and we just had other things that we thought we needed to put our energy in. If we were going to do it, we wanted to do it right."

Lacey Wrigley, campus missionary for Cats for Christ, attended the first pizza competition two years ago and said that students voted right after they took a bite of pizza. This year, students were able to sit and enjoy the pizza and have more time to determine which pizza they liked the most.

This event was not limited to K-State students. Anyone who saw the sign for free pizza was welcome to join. Even though Cats for Christ is a student organization, it is also open to non-traditional students as well as church members.

"We don't turn anybody away," Wrigley said.

Howell said their hope was to attract more members and have a chance to interact with new people not just returning members.

"That's part of the reason for doing this, to get a little visibility and to get more people interested," Howell said.

Morien said almost all of the usual members of Cats for Christ were in attendance and that it was a great opportunity for them to interact with anyone who was there for the first time.

"It's pulling people right off the street," Morien said. "There was a guy that saw a sign for free pizza and walked right up. Hopefully we get a chance to meet him and get him connected with our ministry."

Cats for Christ is a ministry for the Manhattan Church of Christ. Howell said you could think of Cats for Christ as an outreach program for the students of K-State. The overall objective is to serve the K-State community and help them with various needs including spiritual needs.

There are no membership requirements to become a part of Cats for Christ.

"Our goal is to connect with students who are needing a closer walk with Christ," Wrigley said about the overall efforts of Cats for Christ. "We provide leadership opportunities and help students mature spiritually."

of Texas Tech. The Wildcats started the season 4-3 in their first seven matches but caught fire as they won nine matches in a row before falling to Texas A&M at Reed Arena.

The Wildcats were 16-8 and a bubble NCAA team when they got a rematch against the Aggies in a game that changed their season. All-American candidate Kaitlynn Pelger, now a junior, went down with an injury on the match's opening play. The first two sets saw the Wildcats get defeated by double digits and go into intermission down two sets to zero.

However, the Wildcats pulled out an incredible comeback and won the next three sets to win the match and jumpstart the rest of the season.

In the first round of the NCAA tournament, the Wildcats defeated in-state rival Wichita State in three sets. This set up a rematch with former Big 12 rival and No. 2-ranked Nebraska in Lincoln. The match went to the fifth set before K-State was able to prevail 15-11, sending the Wildcats to the Sweet 16. That victory over the No. 2 Cornhuskers made the highest ranked team that the Wildcats have ever defeated.

The Wildcats' run ended in the Sweet 16 against the Pepperdine Wave, and the Wildcats finished 22-11.

Pelger ended the season named an honorable mention All-American as only a sophomore. Pelger was voted first team All Big 12, while current junior Lilla Porubek was voted honorable mention All-Big 12. The Wildcats return with all but one player back and add freshman setter Katie Brand to a team picked to finish third in the Big 12.
